Chain Chain Change: For Black Women Dealing with Physical and Emotional Abuse. It’s not easy to make the decision to stay or leave, but this book can help. Chain Chain Change is for the black woman who wants to understand the role of emotional abuse and violence in her life, and for the activist and professional who works with domestic violence. Chain Chain Change discusses stereotypes and cultural assumptions and offers positive suggestions on getting support from emergency agencies, legal system, shelters, counselors and the church. Chain Chain Change is for any black woman who has ever wondered if she’s abused—for any black woman who wants to turn her life around.	White, Evelyn C. Do Arrests and Restraining Orders Work? Since empirical research on domestic violence began in the 1970's, it has become clear that without intervention, significant percentages of domestic violence cases escalate into more serious incidents. However, with the exception of cases resulting in homicide, here are no reliable criminal justice statistics that document the rates of serious domestic violence incidents. Featuring writings from noted contributors, Do Arrests and Restraining Orders Work? grapples with the markedly different results of research and analyses on the effectiveness of arrests and restraining orders. This probing volume examines the proper role of arrest and the degree to which the criminal justice system can rely on restraining orders to prevent domestic and other kinds of violence. Representing a wide array of research methods, the chapters include a variety of perspectives, including those from police, prosecutors, the judiciary, and probation officers.	Buzawa, Eve & Carl, ed. Ending Domestic Violence: Changing Public Perceptions/Halting the Epidemic: Despite media campaign attempts to educate the public on issues surrounding domestic violence, it still remains the most prevalent form of violence against women in this country. Ending Domestic Violence is based on public opinion surveys gathered for the Family Violence Prevention Fund from 1992 to 1996. Setting the stage with an excellent overview of the battered women's movement, the authors go on to examine current public perception of the problem, intervention, and the dramatic shifts that have occurred in recent years. To better understand the role of cultural context as it relates to domestic violence, three experts in the field-each a woman of color herself-were invited to collaborate on a chapter detailing the results of their research in African-American, Latino, and Asian-American populations. Featuring this enriching ethnic perspective, the authors consider the implications for change the research could have on public opinion and behavior. Every Mother's Son: The Role of Mothers in the Making of Men. Is it possible for us to bring up boys in a non-sexist way? That's the question at the core of this groundbreaking book, now in its first paperback edition. During the first ten years of her son Daniel's life, Judith Arcana kept a journal in which she recorded her experiences as a mother-specifically as a mother of a boy. Drawing from her journal and from interviews with sixty mothers and sons, Arcana presents a compelling examination of male socialization and the role of women in	Arcana, Judith	The Seal Press 3131 Western Ave ste.410 Seattle, WA 98121 sealpress@scn.org www.seanet.com/~sealpress/	1986

Rural Women Battering and the Justice System: An Ethnography This book presents a thorough and arresting look at the experiences of battered women in rural communities. While living in the rural areas of Kentucky, Neil Websdale conducted his ethnographic research, and he situated the voices of rural battered women at the center of his research. Websdale clearly demonstrates how rural patriarchy and the insidious "good ol' boy network" of law enforcement and local politics sustain and reproduce the subordinate, vulnerable, isolated position of many rural women. Taking into account how traditional patterns of intervention often put women in isolated communities at further risk, the author recommends a coordinated multi-agency approach to dealing with rural battering that is spearheaded by state feminist agencies. To Be An Anchor in the Storm: Guide for Families & Friends of Abused Women. A comprehensive education on the domestic violence-and the tools to intervene in a way that helps, not hurts. To Be An Anchor in the Storm is the first hands-on guide for people who want to assist a friend or loved one in her struggle to escape domestic violence. The survivor of a batterer herself, Susan Brewster, has counseled abused women for more than a decade. Now she weaves together lessons from her own life and case histories, including the complete story of a woman called Jackie as she supports her sister's attempts to leave her abusive husband. Brewster will teach you to recognize the signs of abuse, handle your own negative feelings, deal with the batterer, and become an effective advocate and more. This book will give you the understanding you need to give strength to those trying to break free.	Brewster, Susan M.S.S.W.	Ballantine www.randomhouse.com	1997

What to do When Love Turns Violent: A Practical Resource for Women in Abusive Relationships If you are a woman or know someone who is, this book is the most practical, indispensable resource for you to end the abuse. Coming from someone who has been there and survived, this book arms you with everything you need to know to make the right choices. The first part spells out an action plan to get out of danger and find immediate help: making a protective order work, calling the police, finding a safe shelter, seeking medical attention, pressing charges, getting financial assistance. The second part details how to stay safe and regain control over your life: preparing for safety at home and on the job, protecting your children, ending the relationship, rebuilding your life.
